on march 17 2011 many syrians rose up against the authoritarian asad regime that had ruled them with an iron fist for forty years initial successes were quickly quashed and the revolution seemed to devolve into a civil war pitting the government against its citizens and extremist mercenaries as of late 2015 almost 300 000 syrians have been killed and over half of a total population of 23 million forced out of their homes nine million are internally displaced and over four million are wandering the world many on foot or in leaky boats countless numbers have been disappeared these shocking statistics and the unstoppable violence notwithstanding the revolution goes on the story of the attempted crushing of the revolution is known less well covered has been the role of artists and intellectuals in representing to the world and to their people the resilience of revolutionary resistance and defiance how is it possible that artists filmmakers and writers have not been cowed into numbed silence but are becoming more and more creative how can we make sense of their insistence that despite the apocalypse engulfing the country their revolution is ongoing and that their works participate in its persistence with smartphones pens voices and brushes these artists registered their determination to keep the idea of the revolution alive dancing in damascus traces the first four years of the syrian revolution and the activists creative responses to physical and emotional violence in this comprehensive study of the islamic revival from 1947 to the present historian david selbourne traces in detail the complex causes motivating the rise of muslim fundamentalism in many countries and the west's largely uncomprehending response to it he frankly describes the hostilities cruelties and errors of judgment on both sides writing neither from the left nor from the right selbourne pieces together up to date information from more numerous sources than in any other work on the subject he highlights the grotesque role that some sections of the western media have played and seeks to do justice to the islamist cause demonstrating how many of the real issues of the islamic revival have been evaded selbourne argues that whether the reawakening of the islamic and arab worlds has taken the political form of arab nationalism as under the leadership of egyptian president gamal abdul nasser in the 1950s or the economic form of the opec oil embargo in 1973 and 1974 or the religious form of the iranian revolution of 1989 and the present al qaeda suicide squads in all its guises it is motivated by a sense of entitlement in muslims to determine their own destiny free of western subordination selbourne concludes with a warning against the illusions of the west about its superiority and ability to contain a force that is confident of its own moral superiority and certain of its ultimate triumph addressed both to general readers and to policy makers academics and journalists the losing battle with islam will stand for some time as one of the most impartial and authoritative accounts of a half century of western conflict with islam
