built on interviews with over 100 lobbyists kenneth godwin scott ainsworth and erik godwin show that much of the research on organized interests overlooks the lobbying of regulatory agencies even though it accounts for almost half of all lobbying even though bureaucratic agencies have considerable leeway in the how they choose to implement law this groundbreaking new book argues that lobbying activity is not mainly a struggle among competing interests over highly collective goods rather it is the public provision of private goods through a series of highly readable case studies the authors employ both neopluralist and exchange perspectives to explore the lobbying activity that occurs in the later stages of the policymaking process which are typically less partisan involve little conflict and receive scant public attention lobbying and policymaking the public pursuit of private interests is an ideal way to expose students to cutting edge research in an accessible fascinating package what impact does un peacekeeping have on the politics of authoritarianism in host countries this book advances a theoretically innovative and empirically rich answer to this question while the un does not intentionally promote authoritarianism it faces a number of constraints and dilemmas that give rise to what we call authoritarian enabling enabling can occur through two mechanisms capacity building and the creation of a permissive environment which enhance the ability of host governments to engage in authoritarian behavior and signal to them that doing so is low cost this book illustrates these two mechanisms with four in depth case studies of un peacekeeping operations untac in cambodia monuc monusco in the democratic republic of congo minustah in haiti and unmil in liberia the analysis is based on primary interview data from over 200 interviews the authors explore the sources of enabling identifying the trade offs and contradictions that give rise to these two mechanisms they include respect for sovereignty the importance of working relations with the host government the tension between democracy and other mission goals the pressure to demonstrate quick results and divergences within missions and the broader international community while enabling stops short of the outright promotion of authoritarianism it explains why the un's activities often appear to contradict its stated objectives and the outcomes it delivers fall short of its goals in addition to its theoretical and empirical contributions the book suggests how these dilemmas and challenges can be overcome moves towards freer markets many efforts were pooled together in making this book three years ago an attempt was made by one of the editors to get a project on agricultural risk management and sustainability areas funded by the european commission probably deeming the proposal as prematurely novel for europe the commission's screening experts abandoned its evaluation following that experience it became apparent that the literature on the theme ought to be strengthened and emphasized through a book by a well known publishing house the editorial team was formed relatively quickly and an invitation to known experts in the field for contributions was issued subsequently kluwer academic publishers evaluated an edited volume proposal package and final revisions were made prior to submitting the entire manuscript for publication we are gratefully acknowledging the moral support of several individuals as well as the patience of our publishers
