a bbc radio 4 book of the week when the first world war broke out the suffragettes suspended their campaigning and joined the war effort for pioneering suffragette doctors and life partners flora murray and louisa garrett anderson that meant moving to france where they set up two small military hospitals amidst fierce opposition yet their medical and organisational skills were so impressive that in 1915 flora and louisa were asked by the war ministry to return to london and establish a new military hospital in a vast and derelict old workhouse in covent garden s endell street that they did creating a 573 bed hospital staffed from top to bottom by female surgeons doctors and nurses and developing entirely new techniques to deal with the horrific mortar and gas injuries suffered by british soldiers receiving 26 000 wounded men over the next four years flora and louisa created such a caring atmosphere that soldiers begged to be sent to endell street and then following the end of the war and the spanish flu outbreak the hospital was closed and flora louisa and their staff were once again sidelined in the medical profession the story of endell street provides both a keyhole view into the horrors and thrills of wartime london and a long overdue tribute to the brilliance and bravery of an extraordinary group of women by 1952 the chinese communist party had suppressed all organized resistance to its regime and stood unopposed or so it has been believed internal party documents declassified just long enough for historian paul mariani to send copies out of china disclose that one group deemed an enemy of the state held out after the others had fallen a party report from shanghai marked top secret reveals a determined often courageous resistance by the local catholic church drawing on centuries of experience in struggling with the chinese authorities the church was proving a stubborn match for the party mariani tells the story of how bishop later cardinal ignatius kung pinmei the jesuits and the catholic youth resisted the regime s punishing assault on the shanghai catholic community and refused to renounce the pope and the church in rome acting clandestinely mirroring tactics used by the previously underground ccp shanghai s catholics persevered until 1955 when the party arrested kung and 1 200 other leading catholics the imprisoned believers were later shocked to learn that the betrayal had come from within their own ranks though the ccp could not eradicate the catholic church in china it succeeded in dividing it mariani s secret history traces the origins of a deep split in the chinese catholic community where relations between the patriotic and underground churches remain strained even today
