this book crosses disciplinary boundaries to investigate how the benefits of green spaces can be further incorporated in public health in this regard the book highlights how ecosystem services provided by green spaces affect multiple aspects of human health and well being offering a strategic way to conceptualize the topic for centuries scholars have observed the range of health benefits associated with exposure to nature as people continue to move to urban areas it is essential to include green spaces in cities to ensure sustained human health and well being such insights can not only advance the science but also spark interdisciplinary research and help researchers creatively translate their findings into benefits for the public the book explores this topic in the context of big picture frameworks that enhance communication between the environmental public health and social sciences proposing and demonstrating the ways in which we need to rethink urban green spaces as cities societies and environments evolve renowned scholar cecil c konijnendijk explores urban green spaces as essential parts of cities chapters offer a comprehensive look at how their roles have changed over time and will continue to do so moving from their conventional purpose as areas for recreation to become spaces contributing to climate adaptation biodiversity conservation and economic development recent years have seen sustained public debate and controversy over the greening of european cities associated with the environmental movement pressures of urban redevelopment and the promotional strategies of cities competing in a global market but the european debate over urban green space has a long history dating back to victorian concerns for the green lungs of the city to combat the health and social problems caused by rapid population and industrial growth this book explores the multiplicity of green space developments in the modern city ranging over parks and commons garden suburbs and the cities in the park allotment gardens green belts and national urban parks it is concerned not only with the different types of green space but the many influences shaping their evolution from international planning ideas to the rise of modern day sport and leisure and the effects of the transport revolution no less vital in this story is the interaction of the many actors involved in the often fractious political process of creating green spaces architects and planners politicians developers and other businessmen ngos and local residents this volume is particularly concerned with contexts how international planning ideas are transmitted and adapted in different european cities how the construction of green space is affected by local power structures and relationships and how ordinary people perceive and use green spaces quite often at variance with official designs the european city and green space looks at these and other issues through the prism of four metropolises london stockholm helsinki and st petersburg all represent different types of north european city yet each has experienced distinctive economic political and cultural trajectories whilst also facing powerful challenges and problems of similar kinds with regard to green space this volume examines how each has responded to them and what patterns emerge the provision of urban parks recreation grounds and other green spaces can make a vital contribution to the quality of urban life and to the achievement of a range of government objectives in relation to improved health sustainable neighbourhood renewal and community cohesion especially in more deprived areas this nao report examines the effectiveness of national policy initiatives on green space issues focusing on progress made to assess the quality of urban green spaces to improve financial management procedures and to protect and enhance provision through the planning system overall the report finds that the decline in quality of urban green spaces has been halted in most areas with signs of recovery in many places greater priority for green space investment and new sources of funds from central government and the lottery have enabled local authorities and other public bodies working in partnership with local communities to bring about the refurbishment and renewal of many green spaces however surveys show that there is a wide variation between urban local authorities and improvements need to be in relation to the sharing and application of good practice on green space management ambient and household air pollution are a major cause of death and disease globally this public health threat is being increased due to the rapid urbanization process and environmental degradation that characterizes the 21st century and that have a higher impact in developing countries the world health organization who urban health initiative uhi is implemented as a response to the world health assembly wha resolution 68 8 from may 2015 which requests who to build health sector capacity to work with other sectors support countries to identify effective policy measures track progress and continue to update the evidence for health impacts of air pollution who conducted a pilot project in the city of accra ghana to address air pollution and related health effects in cities in low and middle income countries Imics the initiative provides a health based implementation framework to reduce deaths and diseases associated with air pollutants and realize climate and other health benefits e g less injuries and safe physical activity particular attention has been given to assessing the impacts of policies in sectors responsible for air pollution specifically household energy land use waste and transport activities this report includes discussions on the main results and impacts of the pilot project conducted in accra and it provides guidance and available tools that can be adapted to similar initiatives around the world to assess the health impacts of air pollution promote policies to reduce air pollution and plan healthier environments the long term development of public green spaces such as parks public gardens and recreation grounds in london during the twentieth century is a curiously neglected subject despite the fact that various kinds of green spaces cover huge areas in cities in the uk today this book explores how and why public green spaces have been created and used in london and what actors have been involved in their evolution during the course of the twentieth century building on case studies of the contemporary boroughs of camden and southwark and making use of a wealth of archival material the author takes us through the planning and creation stages to the intended and actual uses and ongoing management of the spaces by highlighting the rise and fall of municipal authorities and the impact of neo liberalism after the 1970s the book also deepens our understanding of how london has been governed planned and ruled during the twentieth century it makes a crucial contribution to academic as well as political discourse on the history and present role of green space in sustainable cities the green city and social injustice examines the recent urban environmental trajectory of 21 cities in europe and north america over a 20 year period it analyses the circumstances under which greening interventions can create a new set of inequalities for socially vulnerable residents while also failing to eliminate other environmental risks and impacts based on fieldwork in ten countries and on the analysis of core planning policy and activist documents and data the book offers a critical view of the growing green planning orthodoxy in the global north it highlights the entanglements of this tenet with neoliberal municipal policies including budget cuts for community initiatives long term green spaces and housing for the most fragile residents and the focus on large scale urban redevelopment and high end real estate investment it also discusses hopeful experiences from cities where urban greening has long been accompanied by social equity policies or managed by community groups organizing around environmental justice goals and strategies the book examines how displacement and gentrification in the context of greening are not only physical but also socio cultural creating new forms of social erasure and trauma for vulnerable residents its breadth and diversity allow students scholars and researchers to debunk the often depoliticized branding and selling of green cities and reinsert core equity and justice issues into green city planning a much needed perspective building from this critical view the book also shows how cities that prioritize equity in green access in secure housing and in bold social policies can achieve both environmental and social gains for all the last twenty years have witnessed an important movement in the aspirations of public policy beyond meeting merely material goals towards a range of outcomes captured through the use of the term wellbeing nonetheless the concept of wellbeing is itself ill defined a term used in multiple different contexts with different meanings and policy implications bringing together a range of perspectives this volume examines the intersections of wellbeing and place including immediate applied policy concerns as well as more critical academic engagements conceptualisations of place context and settings have come under critical examination and more nuanced and varied understandings are drawn out from both academic and policy related research whilst quantitative and some policy approaches treat place as a static backdrop or context others explore the interrelationships of emotional social cultural and experiential meanings that are both shape place and are shaped in place similarly wellbeing may be understood as a relatively stable and measurable entity or as a more situation dependent and relational effect the book is structured into two sections essays that explore the dynamics that determine wellbeing in relation to place and essays that explore contested understandings of wellbeing both empirically and theoretically remarkably more than half of the world's population now lives in cities and the numbers grow daily as people abandon rural areas this fully updated and revised seventh edition of the classic text offers readers a comprehensive set of tools for understanding world regional geography as seen through the urban landscape and by extension the world's politics, cultures, and economies, providing a sweeping overview of world urban geography. Noted experts explore the major global regions; each regional chapter considers urban history, economy, culture, and environment, as well as special problems and future prospects. A regional map shows the major cities, a summary of basic statistical information about the cities, and urbanization in each region, and a list of ten salient points about that region's urban experience. Each region chapter concludes with a list of references, including films and webpages, which can be used by the student and instructor for additional information about specific cities. This edition adds the important new themes of climate change and migration, while continuing to focus specifically on sustainability, water, technology, social and environmental justice, security, and conflict. The history of urban settlement, urban planning, trends, and daily life vignettes of key cities give the reader a vivid understanding of daily life and the spirit of place. The opening chapter presents an overview of key terms and concepts and explores contemporary world urbanization, and a concluding chapter projects the world's urban future, generously illustrated in full color with a new selection of photographs, maps, and diagrams. The text also includes a rich array of textboxes to highlight key topics, ranging from migration and immigration to LGBTQ activism, human security, and climate change. Clearly written and timely, Cities of the World will be invaluable for those teaching introductory or advanced classes on global cities, regional geography, the developing world, and global urban studies.

This book aims to understand how the wellbeing benefits of urban green spaces are analysed and valued, and why they are interpreted and translated into action or inaction, into success and/or failure. The provision, care, and use of natural landscapes in urban settings, e.g. parks, woodland, nature reserves, riverbanks, are under-researched in academia and under-resourced in practice. Our growing knowledge of the benefits of natural urban spaces for wellbeing contrasts with asset management approaches in practice that view public green spaces as liabilities. Why is there a mismatch between what we know about urban green space and what we do in practice? What makes some cities more successful than others, and who decides on this measure of success, and how is this constituted? This book sets out to answer these and related questions by exploring a range of approaches to designing planning and managing different natural landscapes in urban settings
