this study examines the process of unionizing domestic workers in lebanon highlighting the potentialities as well as the obstacles confronting it and looks at the multiple power relations involved through axes of class gender race and nationality the author situates this struggle within the larger scene of the labor union movement in the country and discusses the contribution of women s rights organizations in rendering visible cases of abuse against migrant domestic workers she argues that the death of class politics has made women s rights organizations address migrant domestic worker issues as a separate labor category further contributing to their production as an exception under neoliberalism in militant women of a fragile nation malek abisaab takes a gendered approach to labor conflicts anticolonial struggles and citizenship in modern lebanon the author traces the conditions and experiences of women workers at the french tobacco monopoly torn by civil war its major city in shambles and occupied by foreign peacekeeping forces as well as foreign armies the republic of lebanon in the 1980s was struggling to regroup rebuild and resolve its problems under new leadership in this analytical survey first published in 1983 professor gordon addresses such questions as why the republic rooted in the distant past succumbed to such disintegration lebanon s multi ethnic character and the palestinian presence are considered fully and lebanon is examined in the international context inevitably with particular reference to the creation of israel and its consequences the country is viewed both in its own right and also as a small skiff on a very rough regional and international sea this book explores how in the wake of the anthropocene the growing call for urgent decarbonisation and accelerated energy transitions might have unintended consequences for energy poverty justice and democracy especially in the global south dilemmas of energy transitions in the global south brings together theoretical and empirical contributions focused on rethinking energy transitions conceptually from and for the global south and highlights issues of justice and inclusivity it argues that while urgency is critical for energy transitions in a climate changed world we must be wary of conflating goals and processes and enquire what urgency means for due process drawing from a range of authors with expertise spanning environmental justice design theory ethics of technology conflict and gender it examines case studies from countries including bolivia sri lanka india the gambia and lebanon in order to expand our understanding of what energy transitions are and how just energy transitions can be done in different parts of the world overall driven by a postcolonial and decolonial sensibility this book brings to the fore new concepts and ideas to help balance the demands of justice and urgency to flag relevant but often overlooked issues and to provide new pathways forward this volume will be of great interest to students and scholars of energy transitions environmental justice poignant and compelling will resonate with anyone who cares about justice and the abuse of power lindsey hilsum channel 4 news international editor and author of sandstorm essential and urgent kim ghattas journalist and author of black wave lebanon and the wider middle east is in crisis for this extraordinary book journalist dalal mawad conducted a series of searing interviews with women in lebanon weaving an extraordinary story of survival corruption and impunity she begins with a huge explosion in the heart of beirut that killed hundreds of people it was the apocalypse of a sequence of events that have led to lebanon s unprecedented collapse award winning journalist dalal mawad was in lebanon when the blast happened and was one of the first journalists to report on the mysterious and devastating explosion during her reporting she discovered something else that it is the women who stay behind and it is through their stories that the history of the middle east must be re constructed she set out to record the stories of those she met the women long discriminated against and those whose stories are untold she spoke to mothers who lost their children spouses who lost their partners refugee women who have fled from the war in syria and who now find themselves in another failing state we hear from the lebanese grandmother bankrupted by the small nation s collapse who remembers beirut s glory days of the 1960s when the likes of brigitte bardot and miles davis came to beirut and then the women like dalal herself who have left their home behind the women in this book all experienced the explosion and suffered unimaginable loss and tragedy but it is not just this one event that brings them together their personal stories converged to tell the story of a nation whose glory days are long gone now riven by protracted violence lurching from crisis to crisis and fighting to survive it tells not only of what these women have lost but also what lebanon has lost and a part of the middle east that is no more this work first published in 1972 is an objective introduction to the social political and cultural changes that took place in the middle east in the years after the second world war it includes papers by some of the most distinguished scholars in the field as well as personal accounts by insightful observers living in the area it includes articles on such topics as arab socialism and nationalism religious communities ethnic minorities women in arab society education and many more this selected issues paper analyzes the various transmission channels of the syrian crisis though quantification is hampered by the lack of reliable data with focus on the impact on fiscal performance and labor markets it also takes stock of international donor efforts to date the paper also provides overviews of main effects on lebanon s economy the expenditure pressures associated with the refugee presence the impact on poverty and inequality and the added strains on labor markets a section of the paper describes the response by the international community to help lebanon cope with the syrian crisis absent additional international support the needs of both refugees and affected lebanese communities will not be met sound government policies including implementation of a concerted policy framework to deal with refugee issues and a commitment to fiscal discipline will send credible signals to donors and help mobilize budget support tackling the unprecedented refugee crisis requires strong international support there has been a large international humanitarian response but much more is needed
