explores the work of novelists including Naguib Mahfouz, Abd al Khaliq al Rikabi, Jamal al Ghitani, Ben Salem Himmich, Ali Mubarak Adonis, Mahmoud Darwish, and Nizar Qabbani to show how the development of the Arabic novel has created a politics of nostalgia.

Taut, fascinating, and controversial, The Atlantic Sound may prove to be as influential today as Roots was a generation ago. Sunday Times in the Atlantic Sound, Caryl Phillips explores the complex notion of what constitutes home seen through the historical prism of the Atlantic slave trade. He undertakes a personal quest to come to terms with the dislocation and discontinuities that a diasporan history engenders in the soul of an individual. Phillips journeys from the Caribbean to Britain by banana boat, repeating a journey he made to England as a child in the 1950s. He then visits three pivotal cities: Liverpool, developed on the back of the slave trade, Elmina on the west coast of Ghana, site of the most important slave fort in Africa, and Charleston in the American South, celebrated as the city where the Civil War began, not for being the city where fully one-third of African Americans were landed and sold into bondage. Finally, Phillips journeys to Israel, where he encounters a community of two thousand African Americans whose thirty-year sojourn in the Negev Desert leaves him, once again, contemplating the modern condition of diasporan displacement.

This book deals with the contemporary history of the imprisonment of Palestinians in Israeli prisons since 1967 and, since the 2000s, in Palestinian facilities. The prison experience is widely shared in the occupied Palestinian territories; it endurably marks personal and collective stories since the occupation of the Palestinian territories in 1967. Mass incarceration has spun a prison web, a kind of suspended detention, approximately 40 percent of the male population has been to prison. It shows how the judicial and prison practices applied to Palestinian residents of the OPT are major fractal devices of control contributing to the management of Israeli borders and shape a specific bordering system based on a mobility regime such that borders are mobile, networked, and endless. This history of confinement is that of the prison web and of the in-between political, social, and personal spaces people weave between inside and outside prison, based on in-depth ethnographic fieldwork, oral and written sources, archives, and extensive institutional documentation. This political anthropology book deals with carceral citizenships and subjectivities over time. Imprisonment has had profound effects on personal experiences, on masculinities, femininities, gender relations, parentality, and intimacy woven like a web. This story is built around places, moments, people, and their testimonies.
