explores the history and significance of election violence in zimbabwe from the 1980s to the present day this book is about presidents in parliamentary systems one commonly recurring political debate within parliamentary systems is over whether or not the public should directly elect the head of state despite the importance of this topic in practical politics political scientists have offered little empirical evidence yet made bold assumptions about the consequences of popular elections for heads of state a common argument is that direct elections enhance presidents legitimacy thereby increasing their activism and encouraging authoritarian tendencies another popular assumption is that direct presidential elections are more heavily contested and partisan polarizing and dividing political elites and the electorate proponents of direct elections argue that such elections will help decrease voter alienation and apathy this book challenges the conventional wisdom using both quantitative and qualitative empirical evidence from democratic systems across the world this book demonstrates that compared to indirect selection methods direct elections do not yield more active and contentious presidents do not polarize political elites or society and do not remedy political apathy rather presidential activism in both semi presidential and pure parliamentary systems is shaped by political opportunity framework the institutional strength and partisan composition of both parliament and government further because holding the presidency provides parties with an electoral asset direct and indirect presidential elections can be equally contentious and polarizing last but not least rather than decreasing apathy direct election is associated with increased voter fatigue and decreased turnout in parliamentary elections by about seven percentage points this volume focuses on the relationship between the tasks of institutional design and the outcomes of the process of economic and political liberalization in latin america and in central and eastern europe the contributors emphasize the design of institutions to serve a market economy the design of electoral laws and the design of executive legislative relations within this framework each chapter discusses the legacy of the pre existing authoritarian regime the range of preferences among various strategic actors with regard to the pace and mix of reforms and the consequences of final choices for the institutionalization of effective economies and the process of democratization countries throughout latin america and central and eastern europe are moving from semi closed to open economies and from authoritarian to democratic political systems despite important differences between the regions these transitions involve similar tasks the establishment of governmental institutions and electoral systems conducive to legitimation of the new and fragile democracies and expansion of the institutional infrastructure of a market economy this volume looks at both regions focusing on the relationship between the tasks of institutional design and the outcomes of the process of economic and political liberalization in particular the contributors emphasize the design of institutions to serve a market economy the design of electoral laws and the design of executive legislative relations each chapter discusses the legacy of the pre existing authoritarian regime the range of preferences among various strategic actors the government state bureaucracies opposition parties and interest groups with regard to the pace and mix of reforms and the consequences of final choices for the institutionalization of effective economies and the process of democratization tanzania has been independent in 2011 for 50 years while most neighbouring states have gone through violent conflicts tanzania has managed to implement extensive reforms without armed political conflicts hence tanzania is an interesting case for peace and development research this dissertation analyses the political development in tanzania since the introduction of the multiparty system in 1992 with a focus on the challenges for the democratisation process in connection with the 2000 and 2005 elections the question of to what extent tanzania had moved towards a consolidation of democracy is analysed by looking at nine different institutions of importance for democratisation grouped in four spheres the state the political civil and economic society focus is on the development of the political society and the role of the opposition in particular the analysis is based on secondary and primary material collected between september 2000 to april 2010 the main conclusion is that even if the institutions of liberal democracy have gradually developed in practice single party rule has continued manifested in the 2005 election when the ccm won 92 of seats despite impressive economic growth poverty remains deep and has not been substantially reduced on a theoretical level this brings the old debate between liberal and substantive democracy back to the fore neither the economic nor the political reforms have brought about a transformation of the political and economic system resulting in the poor majority gaining substantially more political influence and improved economic conditions hence it is argued that the interface between the economic political and administrative reforms has not been sufficiently considered in the liberal democratic tradition liberal democracy is necessary for a democratic development but not sufficient for democracy to be consolidated for that a substantive democratic development is necessary
