the shifting image of the hasmoneans in the eyes of their contemporaries and later generations is a compelling issue in the history of the maccabean revolt and the hasmonean commonwealth based on a series of six jewish folktales from the second temple period that describe the hasmonean dynasty and its history from its legendary founders through achievement of full sovereignty to downfall this volume examines the hasmoneans through the lens of reception history on the one hand these brief colorful legends are embedded in the narrative of the historian of the age flavius josephus on the other hand they are scattered throughout the extensive halakhic exegetical compositions known as rabbinic literature redacted and compiled centuries later each set of parallel stories is examined for the motivation underlying its creation its original message language and the historical context this analysis is followed by exploration of the nature of the relationship between the josephan and the rabbinic versions in an attempt to reconstruct the adaptation of the putative original traditions in the two corpora and to decipher the disparities different emphases reworking and unique orientations typical of each these adaptations reflect the reception of the pristine tales and thus disclose the shifting images of the hasmoneans in later generations and within distinct contexts the compilation and characterization of these sources which were preserved by means of two such different conduits of transmission brings us closer to reconstruction of a lost literary continent a hidden jewish atlantis of early pseudo historical legends and facilitates examination of the relationship between the substantially different libraries and worlds of josephus and rabbinic literature this research report answers the question how and specifically in what passages do the distinct rabbinic modes of discourse halakhah and aggadah intersect how do they make a statement in common halakhah is given priority then where and how does aggadah play a role in halakhic discourse what is at stake is the context of thought and expression established by systematic composites compilations of many discrete facts in the service of a coherent argument what is catalogued is the intersection of large aggregates of well composed aggadic data in a halakhic composite or of halakhic ones in an aggadic setting the upshot is simple the aggadic documents rarely introduce halakhic materials in their exposition of aggadic propositions and the contrary is also the case the exposition of the halakhic components of the halakhic documents meaning nearly the entirety of the mishnah tosefta and yerushalmi and the greater part of the bavli only rarely requires aggadic complements or supplements yet while the aggadic documents rarely resort to halakhic materials to make the case they wish to set forth in some of the rabbinic documents of the formative age the presentation of the halakhah is accompanied by a massive aggadic component why and with what outcome the answers to all of these questions are spelled out in this three volume account of the data viewed as ideal types the halakhah defines the norm setting forth what is obligatory the aggadah specifies what exceeds the norm and goes beyond the measure of the law the striking differences of style and substance that differentiate the two categories of discourse present the question of how they intersect in a single coherent statement a system that holds together its two distinct media of thought and expression when we have in hand systematic data on how aggadah contributes to the halakhah and where halakhah serves the purposes of the aggadah we find possible the logical next step where do the two intersect and at what points do the respective complexes of category formations stand autonomous of one another and that leads to the question how do aggadah and halakhah constitute a coherent religious structure and make in common a single systemic statement where within the formative literature of normative judaism they join together what affect the one exercises upon the other and how the whole rabbinic judaism exceeds and transcends the sum of the parts the halakhah the aggadah is spelled out this book of william mallinson s poetry and prose and a small amount of writings by some family members is a vehicle to demonstrate that only history in its purest form the past exists bowing to oscar wilde s dictum that most people are other people even if they do not know it its comments on each poem article or story lead to the book s conclusion that the present cannot exist since it becomes the past as it happens while the future is only in the mind many of the poems and stories were written on impulse inspired by various events but also subliminally by writers and poets such as henry williamson ted hughes and george orwell the book briefly evaluates the circumstances that led to each poem and story refreshingly it avoids textual analysis and categorisation believing that poetry does not lend itself to analysis since it is essentially personal and thus connected to the heart which whatever the opinions of certain psychologists can never be encapsulated in their neatly packaged models even if they use the word psyche instead of heart the same applies to some of the prose pieces whether we are reading the author's trout dolphin frog horse octopus or the au pair the reader will be able to escape from the stifflingly overworked and stilted post modernist literature that has assailed our natural sensitivities to the point of killing them above all the book is a foray into free writing and will take the reader back to childhood through the imagery evoked and strip off the layers of self deception and falsehoods that have accumulated like dust and mud judges a theological commentary for preachers engages hermeneutics for preaching employing theological exegesis that enables the preacher to utilize all the units of the letter to craft effective sermons this commentary unpacks the crucial link between scripture and application the theology of each preaching text i e what the author is doing with what he is saying judges is divided into fourteen preaching units and the theological focus of each is delineated the overall theological trajectory or theme of the book deals with the failure of leadership in the community of god s people since god s people are all called to be leaders in some arena to some degree in some fashion the lessons of judges are applicable to all christians the specific theological thrust of each unit is captured in this commentary making possible a sequential homiletical movement through each pericope of judges while the primary goal of the commentary is to take the preacher from text to theology it also provides two sermon outlines for each of the twelve preaching units of judges the unique approach of this work results in a theology for preaching commentary that promises to be useful for anyone teaching through judges with an emphasis on application
