in this book michael gardiner suggests that the conception of the war ending weapon was tied up with a longer commitment to unified space and singular progress the mission for total weapons can be seen rising with the highly technical defensive war of the later nineteenth century and passing through twentieth century atomic research then the targeting of the outsides of commercial empire and the post war consensus with deterrence as its foundation the end of the cold war brought an opportunity to fully naturalise deterrence but also brought a tacit acceptance of nuclear violence while forms of violence against the individual were rigorously sought out if the world

unifying role of deterrence has always been undermined by the rise of rival empires it has also been questioned by critical communities including the consensus sceptics of the 1950s 60s 1980s 90s nuclear criticism and readers of nuclear ism millennial campaigns for scottish independence and twenty first century descriptions of nuclear colonialism recently it has become more obvious that an anglosphere concept of worldly deterrence was bound to a singular and ultimately nihilistic idea of progress bio michael gardiner is professor in the department of english and comparative literature at the university of warwick servanthood of song is a history of american church music from the colonial era to the present its focus is on the institutional and societal pressures that have shaped church song and have led us directly to where we are today the gulf which separates advocates of traditional and contemporary worship black and white protestant and catholic is not new history repeatedly shows us that ministry to be effective must meet the needs of the entire worshipping community not just one segment age group or class servanthood of song provides a historical context for trends in contemporary worship in the united states and suggests that the current polemical divisions between advocates of contemporary and traditional classically oriented church music are both unnecessary and counterproductive it also draws from history to show that to be the powerful component of worship it can be music whatever the genre must be viewed as a ministry with training appropriate to that servanthood of song provides a critical resource for anyone considering a career in either musical or pastoral ministries in the american church as well as all who care passionately about vital and authentic worship for the church of today
